VERBAL DESCRIPTION:

This is part of a modeled censer. It is made of a fine orange paste with micaceous inclusions. It is solid all the way through. It appears to be a claw of an animal. It has four toes and it gets thicker at the top as a thigh would. The bottom of the foot is flat, but lumpy. The leg on the other hand, has smoothing marks. The toes themselves look as if they could have been shaped by pinching the clay between one's fingers. The top of the toes do not appear to be smoothed. The break is such that it appears the leg came off of some kind of body. It is hard to see a firing core if there is one, as it would require breaking a very thick shell.
